Contributors

Chholay Namgay is a Bhutanese Buddhist. He aspires to be a genuine student and practitioner.

Dzongsar Jamyang Khyentse Rinpoche is an eminent Bhutanese lama, thinker, writer and filmmaker. He is the author of several books including What Makes You Not a Buddhist and Not for Happiness - a Guide to the So-called Preliminary Practices. His recent film is 'Pig at the Crossing'.

Gembo Tshering (Phd) is Assistant Professor, Paro College of Education, Royal University of Bhutan. His academic interests include comparative education, educational technology, pedagogy, andragogy, educational assessment, educational data use, and generative AI (GenAI).

Greg Watkins has PhDs in Religious Studies and the Humanities from Stanford University. He was a longtime lecturer in, and former associate director of, the Structured Liberal Education programme at Stanford University. He is a founding board member of The Shareable World Education Collective.

Jangchu Tenzin is a PhD student in Educational Studies at the University of New Brunswick, Canada, where his research focuses on immersive technology in education. Prior to this, he worked in Bhutan as a teacher, instructional designer, ICT officer, and curriculum developer. His current work examines immersive learning pedagogy, and the relational aspects of learning in immersive environments

Jigme Dema is an Assistant Lecturer in the Cybersecurity Specialisation at Gyalpozhing College of Information Technology (GCIT), Royal University of Bhutan. Her academic interests focus on cybersecurity and emerging technologies, with particular interest in the intersection of cybersecurity and Artificial Intelligence (AI).

Jigme Seldon is an Assistant Lecturer at Gyalpozhing College of Information Technology, Royal University of Bhutan. She has a B.Sc. degree in Computer Science,

Editor

Dasho Kinley Dorji

Editorial Board

Dasho Kinley Dorji
Siok Sian Pek-Dorji
Dr Bjorn Melgaard
Dorji Penjore
Nancy Strickland

with a background in Artificial Intelligence, machine learning, software development, and UI/UX design. Her experience spans applied AI projects, front-end and full-stack development and technology project management.

Katsu Masaki is a faculty member at Konan University, Japan. He is an executive committee member of the Japan-Bhutan Friendship Association. His major publications include "Reorienting the Sustainable Development Goals: Lessons from Bhutan's Gross National Happiness" (Journal of Developing Societies, Vol. 40, No. 2). He is on the editorial board of the Bhutan Journal of Management. He holds a D.Phil. from the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex, UK.

Mike Taubman has a Masters of Education from Stanford University. He has spent his teaching career with Uncommon Schools in the United States. He is a founding board member of The Shareable World Education Collective.

Dr Pallavi Majumdar is a Professor of Communication Arts and Creative Media at Royal Thimphu College. Her experience spans journalism, media education, curriculum development, advocacy and communication consultancy. Her work focuses on journalism, media ethics, digital transformation, AI in higher education and public-interest communication. She has worked with academic institutions, civil society organisations and international development agencies in Bhutan, India and other country contexts.

Pema Chogyal is Programme Analyst with the Inclusive Education, ECCD & SEN Division, School Education Dept., Ministry of Education and Skills Development, Royal Government of Bhutan.

Phuntsho Namgay is the Director of the Department of Innovation and Technology, DHI. He leads the department's efforts in developing Bhutan's Innovation Ecosystem for tech-based and a start-up economy by leveraging Research & Development for technology with values. With an MBA from the Australian Graduate School of Management, his experience ranges from Grass Root Innovations to Ecosystem building.

Reneta Dessallien served the United Nations for 35 years, mainly in Asia and Africa. She was UN Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator and UNDP Resident Representative in Bhutan, Bangladesh, China, Myanmar and India. Prior to that she worked in Mali and Laos, and at UN HQ. She retired in 2021. She holds two Masters Degrees, an MA from Columbia University and an MPA, Harvard Kennedy School of Government.

Sagar Lepcha is an Assistant AI Lecturer at Gyalpozhing College of Information Technology, Royal University of Bhutan.He has worked across academic institutions and contributed to industry-focused projects in AI, software, and emerging technologies. He is passionate about research, and his interests span Artificial Intelligence, Explainable AI, Applied AI, and AI-driven social change.

Siok Sian Pek-Dorji is the founder of, and currently adviser to the Bhutan Centre for Media and Democracy. She is an independent consultant and has been involved in media, communications and civil society related projects for media, development agencies, and the government. She is a member of The Druk Journal editorial board.

Sithar Norbu is Chief Programme Officer in the Public Service Delivery Division under the Prime Minister's Office and has over 17 years of experience in digital government, public service delivery, ICT, and public-sector transformation. His work focuses on strengthening accountability and monitoring in public service delivery, making frontline services more accessible, citizen-centred, and responsive. He holds a Master in Artificial Intelligence for Public Services from Universidad Politécnica de Madrid, Spain, and Politecnico di Milano, Italy.

Srikanth Chandrasekaran heads the business operations for IEEE (Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers - a global technical organisation) in India. He focuses on developing key standardisation programmes in emerging areas building end-to-end trustworthy devices and systems with emphasis on cybersecurity, identity and privacy. Sri also heads the standardisation efforts for the Asia Pacific region and drives the IEEE Blended Learning Program (BLP) initiative, an eLearning platform.

Stephan Sonnenberg is a professor of law teaching at Wesleyan University in the United States. From 2015-2020 he taught with the Jigme Singye Wangchuck School of Law in Bhutan. He focuses on human rights, international development, and in recent years also on artificial intelligence and global governance.

Tobgay works as a Chief, Centre for Academic Innovation and Professional Excellence (CAIPEx), Department of Academic and Research Services, Office of the Vice Chancellor, RUB. He is also the managing editor for the Bhutan Journal of Research and Development.

Tshering is a Chief Programme Officer at the Government Technology Agency (GovTech), Bhutan, where he currently leads the Data Science and Artificial Intelligence Division. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in Computer Science and a Master's Degree in Data Science, with a strong focus on leveraging data, artificial intelligence, and digital technologies to support Bhutan's digital transformation and innovation.

Tshering Cigay Dorji has over twenty years' experience steering digital, AI, and innovation initiatives across Bhutan's public and private sectors. He currently serves as a Royal Civil Service Commissioner and a Steering Committee member of the Desuung Skilling Programme. Previously, he led Thimphu TechPark as its first Bhutanese CEO.

Tshering Yangki is a Lecturer at the Trongsa College of Heritage and Contemporary Studies, Royal University of Bhutan. She pursued graduate studies in Political Communications and Media, and her interests centre on understanding media cultures.

Ugyen Tshering is a Court Registrar at the Supreme Court of Bhutan. He was previously a Registrar in the Thimphu District Court. He has a BA LLB from KIIT University in Odisha, India, and a Post Graduate Diploma in National Law (PGDNL).